Very charming Catalan stone Mas, exceptional setting, views over the valleys and the mountains, bioclimatic renovation, 6 bedrooms with 6 bathrooms, 8 ha of grounds, private and very calm...

Property Description

This unique Catalan stone Mas is set in the beautiful region of Vallespir, Languedoc Roussillon, Occitanie, South of France. Sitting in a dominant position on a hill and overlooking the valleys and mountains, it's surrounded by mountain grassland, juniper trees, wild thyme and lavender, some plum trees below and an oak forest above the Mas. It is very rare to have such an extraordinary, removed, south facing situation with breathtaking views, so everything has been thought here to point out the beauty of the setting, from every room but also from the several terraces with their panoramic views over the mountains. The bioclimatic and ecologic renovation has been carried out to reduce the house's environmental impact at the best, but by preserving the house's authentic character. The scenery changes every day, with the weather, with the seasons? nature lovers will be charmed by this great spectacle! The owners have carefully paid attention to keep the Mas' charm and authenticity with lime walls, exposed stones, beautiful beams, wooden ceilings etc. The bioclimatic renovation complies with four main functions: to absorb the sun's radiation, to stock the captured energy, to distribute and to regulate the gained heat. Same thing for the water with a capture of source for the water supply of the Mas. A fantastic, totally private situation with breathtaking panoramic views - just perfect for nature lovers and very suitable for seminars.
